WOMEN UFFRACE.

BISMARCK, July 8.-[Special.]-The convention met this afternoon and effected complete permanent organization. The candidates n minated at the republican caucus Sajurday were all elected without opposition. They are:

Messenger—J. D. Knight, Cass county.

Pages—Arthur Linn, Bismarck; Harry Ward, Jamestown; Charles Lauder, Wahpeton; Charles Conroy, Mandam. The convention then by resolution, introduced by Selby, of Traill county, declared its support of the constitution of the United States.

The report of the committee on rules for permanent organization was discussed and adopted. It provides for twenty-three

COMMITTEES AS FOLLOWS:

Printing, reporting and publication, accounts and expenses, preamble and declaration of rights, legislative department, judicial department, elective franchise, advantage and publication and publications. chise, education, public institutions and buildings, public debt and public works, militia, county and township organization, apportionment and representation, revenue and taxation, municipal corporations, corporations not municipal, miscellaneous subjects, schedule, school and other public lands, temperance revision and adjustment, impeachment and removal from office.

Judge Carland introduced a resolution authorizing the president to appoint a committee of seven to confer with a simifar committee from South Dakota in regard to the adjustment and settlement of the property of the territory. The resolution was adopted and President Fancher, it is understood, named the committee after the adjournment this evening. E. W. Camp is chairman.

The South Dakota committee is expected to be in Bismarck tomorrow and the committees will at once get together pinnacle and corner of the building, and endeavor to effect a settlement.

Woman's Journal. He is a sawed-off old gentleman with white hair and beard, but there was nothing decrepit about his voice or arguments. The universal suffrage people held a caucus Saturday and decided that they did not want the question of enfranchising women submitted this fall as a separate article, but, that in case it is not incorporated in the consti-tution, they would like the convention to some future time. President Fancher announced that he would not be able to announce his committees for several days and when the convention adjourned it was until Thursday afternoon.

PERSONALITIES.

There are few men in Bismarck who have more friends than Major Hamilton of Grand Forks, and his election as secretary of the convention without opposition is a great source of satisfaction to them. The major makes a model secretary and will keep a model journal of the proceedings. A lot of the South Dakota members of the last house of represents. nembers of the last house of representatiled "An Inventor's Wife." tives were so favorably impressed with the major's ways that they importuned him to move into their state and promised to see that he was elected chief clerk during all time -if he lived that long. The major knows good people when he ball, contestants being the Invincibles goes among them, however, and will stay of Mount Pleasant and Beavers of in North Dakota.

Fred Falley, who was elected sergeant-at-arms, is the editor of the Wahpeton then the other, until the latter part of Fred Falley, who was elected sergeant-Globe. He is a handsome looking gentleman with a smooth face and a rotund form and does not look a bit like the tune of 24 to 22. The young people now man one would have imagined as the enjoyed themselves driving, swinging. author of the fierce (?) diatribes on Rev. and playing croquet until dark, when a B. S. Taylor, which the readers of The grand display of fire works was fired, which Alert have frequently seen reprinted in that and other journals.

The delegation from Stutsman it generally regarded as one of the strongest in the convention. Mr. Fancher has been honored with the presidency, Mr. Camp was the moving spirit in the com-bination that forced the republican cau-cus and gave the organization to the re-publicans and Mr. Blewett stands high as one of the most prominent, hard working and influential of the minority delegates. In the few opportunities which the delegates have so far had to show what kind of stuff they are made of, those from Stutsman have not taken

Two Important Opinions.

Attorney General Johnson Nickeus has been called on for his official opinion upon these two interesting points in law. The district attorney of Burleigh county wants to know if it is necessary to petition lines. General Nickens thinks it is not necessary to so petition, for the reament lands, to be used for public highweys. This general rule, however, he beheves has an exception in the Northern Pacific indemnity limits, for the reason that thirty-three feet of roadway along the torial statues.

The other case comes from Tower for land purchased by him for the county at the annual tax sales. The attorney general differs with the district attorney in this opinion, and basis his belief upon the ground that in this instance, the treasurer is acting in the capacity of fiduciary agent of the county, entirely from under the control of the county commissioners, and it is his duty to serve his principal, not only with fidelity, but with the best exercise of his judgment. Cases are liable to occur when the tax would not amount to as much as the cost of the certificate, and it is plainly not the proper action for the treasurer to cause the county to incur the additional expense. He thinks, however, that the treasurer has the right to include all sales in one certificate. in one certificate.

The Fourth at Mount Pleasant.

At four o'clock Thursday morning the people of Mt. Pleasant were awakened from their peaceful slumbers by the booming of cannon at Rosedale farm, which reminded them that the Fourth had come at last. The stars and stripes were flying at early morn from every which was beautifully and tastefully After the transaction of the above decorated for the occasion. At twelve o'clock the ladies bad a din-

After dinner they all assembled in the hall to listen to the rendering of the promake provisions for the legislature to confer it without a vote of the people, at in a few well chosen words of the stand and in a few well chosen words offered in behalf of the committee a hearty and cordial welcome to all.

He Spends the Night in Jamestown Makes a Speech, and Holds a Public Reception.

Apparently everybody in Jamestown knew that Hon. S. S. Cox and wife, of New York, were due here on last evening's train from Oakes, for when it pulled in on time a large per cent of the population had gathered at the depot to welcome Dakota's champion. Mayor Fuller and his committee were on hand and, led tion to the county commissoners in order by Captain McClelland, entered the disto establish a public highway along sec- tinguished statesman's private car and invited him and Mrs. Cox to become their guests during the stay in the city. son that an act passed by the American They readily consented, and when Mayor congress, and which became a law July Fuller led him out on the platform, his 26, 1866, sets aside thirty-three feet on first appearance was greeted by a tumuleach side of all section lines on govern- tuons hurrah and the startling report of lark, who hides her house within the city one of the forty-two guns which were being fired in his honor, and over all waved Mr. Klaus' new radiant American flag, bearing upon its sky blue backthis land grant was made to the railroad ground forty-two glittering stars. Hence rious throng. Mrs. Cox followed on the arm of Captain McClelland, the receplines of odd sections must be opened in tion committee coming next. There was the regular way, as provided for by terri- but little delay, when Dr. Cloes stepped upon the horse block in front of the hotel and introduced the veteran concuunty, and the district attorney wants gressman. Before three sentences were to know if he is correct in ruling that the uttered, his hearers regarded him as the county treasurer can charge the county fifty cents for every certificate he issues curing the division and admission of Dakota, eloquently of our territory's grand domain, boundless possibilities and progressive people. He sustained his national reputation for being an humorous talker by relating one or two pointed comic anecdotes, and closed by stating that he was merely on a vacation pleasure trip and, like the star of empire. was traveling towards the "sunset." The crowd was in a remarkably good humor and allowed him to escape with his life, even after the perpetration of that horrible gag.

The little talk lasted not more than ten or fifteen minutes, at the close of which the reception committee escorted him to a private parlor in the Gladstone, where several bottles and numerous jokes were cracked. In the general conversation which ensued, he glistened and sparkled like the wine he held in his hand, but scarcely tasted. Every one present was surprised at the intimate knowledge of this country he displayed. from the time McKenzie traversed the trackless waste a century ago to the present time. He gave as one reason for having paid especial attention to the mat-ter, that he read Clark & Lewis' report to the government owing to the fact that the former was a relative of his, and thus becoming interested in the "great American desert," followed up the subject.
The presence of Captain McClellan, his political integrity, past, present and fuold congressional friend, seemed to be a ture: particularly pleasant surprise to him.

A large number of ladies called on Mrs. Cox, who created equally as pleasant an impression as did her famous husband. They were joined here by Lewis Baker and family, of the St. Paul Globe, an old time friend, and the party will proceed to the Yellowstone park and spend a week or more there.

And, as to politics? Well, the great democrat said he was not thinking about that sorely perplexing matter for a few weeks, and professed a dense ignorance as to the rumored intention of the national committees to conduct a spirited campaign in the four new states this fall.

Says He is Not an Unbeliever

Mr. Muir, of Cass county, feels agrieved that The Alert should speak of him as an infidel, even with great big quotation marks guarding the word on either side. He says there is no more foundation for the Fargo Argus and Casselton Republican to so designate him than there would be for him to call Mr. Goodrich (who seconded him in this complaint) a horse thief-that he is not only not an unbeliever in the Christian religion, but is an elder in the Presbyterian church. Mr. Muir states that he would not desire to have any further mention made of this matter had it been published in a community where he is known, but fears that here among strangers a wrong construction may possibly placed upon the intended pleasantry, and wishes this specific statement to be published—which The Alert gladly does. He will promulgate alliance doctrines through Stutsman county next month, and naturally wishes to appear before the people in a true light.

Wonderful Passenger Business.

The tide of travel to the National park is setting in now in good earnest. This morning the overland express, consisted of two sections as usual, but instead of the last train containing emigrants only, there were attached to it three additional Pullman sleepers and diner, conveying the elite of this country to our great northwestern wonder, the Yellowstone region. Six sleepers carrying tourists to the park went west today, a most remarkable event in the ordinary passenger traffic of any railroad.

The phenomenal popularity of the Northern Pacific road, with the first class travel of this country, which popularity has been steadily increasing each year, is due in a great measure to the untiring efforts of General Passenger Agent Fee. He has caught on to the public and won its favors like no other engine to his private car and speci off for cause of the bars it offered to suspicion. Sunday night, after darkness, a body of great highway of the Northern Pacific can credit to his energetic and skillful advertising much of its present success.

Aqueous Bounty. All the dependents of nature smiled yesterday at a gentle shower of rain, which began in the afternoon and fell quietly for some time. No wind or thunder and lightning threatened and shook us, as the down dropping moisture fell. It seemed to come beneficently in every respect and kindly wet the thirsty eaves and grass. For a long time during the continuance of the slower, pigeons conversing together in low tones, remained on the roof of their demiciles, busily engaged in pluming and arranging their feathers and getting the full delight of a shower bath free from the clouds. Even the modest ground-haupting meadow limits and cunningly defeats the designs of cats and children to discover her earthly bower, mounted he top of a tall telephone pole, and without ringing up the central office, which don't help any way, told everybody along the line how very much she liked the gentle rain that washed the dust clean and quickly from her yellow breast and speckled brown back. The cows that spend all day in biting such grass as they can find, took on a zestful appetite and more industriously than ever moved down and stowed away in their leathern caves the green bunches of tender fodder, rendered twice as appetizing by the condiment of rain An old mule, in his own uncultivated and ill mannered way, showed his appreciation of the courtesy of the dripping heavens by turning his back on the friendly shower drops, concealing his tail and with ears furled, become lost in his own mysterious reflections—a phi-losophy which the most learned men and gifted writers have yet been unable to resolve into the conditions of the know-able. The "temple haunting martlet" made wide loops and long mazy curves, cutting the rain drops like a black flying fish. The bird reveled in the happy libation while her chicks could be seen from the door of their adobe dwellings under the eaves, turning their heads from side to side in great wonder at the strange rain. In fact every living thing made merry yesterday and gave thanks to the good old Dame who runs this mundane machine.

A Retired Journalist.

Rev. H. G. Mendenhall, the gentleman who a few brief months since pur chased a controlling interest in the Grand Forks Plainaealer, delivered his valedictory to the public Saturday, in a double leaded leader in that publication. He pays a graceful compliment to the editorial fraternity of the territory, thanks them for courteous treatment, lays the ban of his displeasure on personal journalism, and closes with this vindication proper for me to say that he has had no hand in this change. He has given no money to this paper; he has bought no stock in the company; he has made no trade or dicker with the new management.'

It is learned from another source that two experienced newspaper men from St. Paul. Messrs. Pickering and Sargent, have taken charge of the paper. It is not known accurately just when Mr. Mendenhall will remove to Jamestown to take charge of the college. He is assured a cordial welcome, when ever he may come, for all reports concerning him are highly favorable, both as to his social and professional qualifications.

In Mr. Mendenhall's connection with the Plaindealer, the Mandan Pioneer thus refers to an open secret.

It is an undoubted fact that there are a good many newspaper failures because of a lack of business capacity on the part of the publisher or managing head. That newspaper is the most successful which has one autocrat to manage it, whose word shall be law. If he knows his business and has a fair field and a community that is not too much disposed to work against its own interest, he will keep bankruptcy from staring his institution in the face. But he must know his business. Editor Mendenhall of the Grand Forks Plaindealer—an estimable gentleman who was till a few months ago a Presbyterian minister-has a good community in which to work, but in a very short time he will have to quit the Plaindealer and turn it over to other parties, and bis newspaper experience will have cost him several thousand dol-

It is a fact-perhaps one the general public is not much interested in-that in North Dakota the newspaper business is very much overdone. There are too many of them for the business, and the There are too individual editors are not getting the worth of their hire.

The Sullivan-Kilrain Fight Held in a Saw Mill Over the Mississippi Line.

Reports as to the Outcome of the Fight Conflicting and Unsatisfactory.

Gamblers Evidently Worked the Wires for their Own Pecuniary Gain.

Reports, Considered Authentic, Say Sullivan Won in the Seventy-second Round.

NEW ORLEANS, July 9.—After worry ng around for half the night and speculating on the chances for a fight, people at the hotels, the clubs and on the street moved as with one impulse, toward the depot. After 11 o'clock people trusted not to street cars, but took to cabs and carriages, and every Jehu in the city did a land office business. Down at the depot there was

An Indescribable Crush. It seemed as though everybody in the city was going to the fight, and it happened that everybody wanted to get aboard at the same time. Through care-ess management, holders of inner ring tickets, who paid dearly for their trip, were forced to go through a narrow passage way well guarded by policemen, to reach the cars. At this small opening, several hundred people congregated and jostled, pushed and fought to secure admission. Clothes were torn, hats admission. Clothes were torn, hats crushed and nervous people shocked. dulged in sprinting tactics, going down but the crowd finally got through, and seven cars of the select train were quickly filled.

It was expected that the troops would appear at the depot, but, of the two companies at the city, one could muster but forty men and the other only a baker's dozen. In reply to a requisition made on them by the governor for train accommodations for the troops, the railroad people replied that the state could not be accommodated, since all their rolling stock had been chartered.

At 1:30 the first train, with twelve coaches, pulled out and the conductor and engineer were given orders to go straight to the bottle ground without stop. At the Miss ppi line there was a party of twenty-five armed men and the train was flagged, but no attention was paid to the signal and the special dashed by at a speed of twenty-five miles an hour. Other trains followed until all the ticket holders were on the ground and everything in readiness for the mill at 8 a. m.

The Battle Ground.

The fight took place at Richburg, which is 92 miles from Meridian and 103 from New Orleans. Richburg is virtually owned by Mr. Rich, and the place covers an area of 10,000 acres, extending over three counties of Mississippi. Mr. Rich is the owner of an extensive saw mill, and this place was picked out simply be-160 men went to work, by the aid of bonfires, to perfect the battle ground, which was on the sawdust of the mill, and seats for 1,500 people were hastily constructed.

The ring was built about one-eighth of a mile from the railroad track. It was a pretty spot, with tall pines all around, and the ground was level and covered with green turf. The ring was made of heavy ropes run through stakes deeply driven in the ground, with a square of ampitheatrical seats rising on the four sides of the soured ring.

The owner of the property had made splendid arrangements for the pugilists. and room on the property was provided for Kilrain. Quarters were also fitted up for Sullivan and his party. In these apartments the fighters spent the last night before the fight.

Owing to discourteous treatment by the managers of the fight the Western Union Telegraph company refused to furnish facilities for reporting the prog-ress of the fight from the ring side, and consequently news as to the result of the bettle has been meagre and hard to ob-

HOW THE BATTLE WENT.

Particulars of the Long Talked of Fight Between Sullivan and Kilrain.

NEW ORLEANS, July 9 .- The big fight is over. Kilrain has been fairly, squarely, honorably whipped in a contest in which the beaten man has no cause to be ashamed of his defeat. There is no manner of doubt that Jake Kilrain is a game man, and a good fighter, and the men who saw him fight will put up their money on him the next time he enters the ring against any living man except Sullivan. Two sheriffs were present at the ring side but no movement was made to interfere with the figure. There was a long dispute regarding the selec-tion of a referee, John Fitz-patrick of Missouri being finally chosen. After the men had each put up $1,000 to win the stripping was completed, and Sullivan's superi-ority in the matter of size and muscular development was at once commented upon. As the sun was clouded when the fight began there was no advantage to either man in respect of position.

THE ROUNDS. Time was called at 10:10. In the first round Kilrain won the first fall. In the third Kilrain rushed in ane clinched, but Sullivan avoided him and delivered some terrific short arm blows. In the fourth round both men were panting, and there were cries of "Sullivan is licked." Kilrain succeeded in getting Sullivan's head in chancery, but John L. got in a good blow on his opponent's

In the sixth round when Kilrain drew first blood, Sullivan went at him right and left, Kilrain retreated but Sullivan followed him up and gave him a right hander in the neck, followed by his left in the stomach which laid Kilrain flat on his back.

The tenth round was a disastrous one for Kilrain. Sullivan delivered heavy blows on Jake's chest. neck. ribs and nose and finally sent him to earth.

In the thirteenth round Sullivan beat Kilrain all around the ring and finally with a heavy breast blow felled him like an ox.

at the slightest blow. He, however, managed to get in some good blows. In the twenty-fourth round Kilrain succeeded in giving Sullivan several powerful breast blows, but before the round ended he received in return one in the neck which floored him and for a moment he was thought to be senseless. In the thirty-eighth the referee again insisted that Kilrain should fight and not walk around. Donovan objected. but the spectators howled him down, fullivan delivered two terrific body blows in this round and a third in the breast that sent Kilrain two feet backwards to the ropes, where he fell in a heap. In the forty-fourth round, when Sullivan began to vomit, the Kilrainites shouted to their man to go for Sullivan in the belly. Kilrain could not be persuaded, however, to put up his fists until his opponent had indicated his readiness to proceed. In return for his consideration he got a blow in the neck that felled him. So it went on round after round, every one ending in Kilrain going down. In the fifty-fourth round Kilrain succeeded in getting in on Sullivan's face, but the latter got Kil-rain's head in chancery and pummelled him to his heart's content. The next round ended by Kilrain falling to the ground completely exhausted while endeavoring to spar. Kilram was knocked down in the sixtieth round. In the sixty-third he received a telling blow just under the heart and in the sixty-fifth Sullivan went at him with a rush. In the next round the Boston boy forced him against the ropes and banged him right and left. In the sixtyseventh and sixty-ninth rounds he knocked him under the ropes, while in the sixty-eighth he sent in two frightful upper cuts.

From this on to the seventy-fourth round Kilrain dropped at the slightest movement of Sullivan's fist. A breast blow felled him in the seventy-fifth and when time was next called he failed to rise.

Kilrain was toeing the scratch when Donovan threw up the sponge. He pro-tested that he was able to continue, but Donovan said there was no sense in standing up to be knocked down. The defeated man was bundled up and hurried to a carriage and driven to the train. He bitterly bemoaned his fate and wept. All his friends stuck to him and cheered him up, except Mitchell, who seemed deeply chagrined and held aloof. Sullivan and his party also hurried to the train in a carriage, and the two parties were soon on their way to New Orleans.

remains were taken from his private residence and sent to the legislative hall, where they laid in state until 4 o'clock iu the afternoon, when the funeral took place. The government had charge of the arrangements, and the demonstra-tion was the greatest ever witnessed in the country.

NUMEROUS NOTES.

BISMARCK, July 4-[Special]--The streets of Bismarck were livlier today than they have been in many past. The business houses and many private residences were handsomely decorated with all kinds of flags, bunting and patriotic designs. The Tribune office and Holt & Co.'s Insurance office, where the press had headquarters, were extremely well decorated, showing great care and expense taken therein. Early in the day, the town was astir. The cavalry from Fort Yates, and the infantry companies from both Yates and Lincoln added greatly to the military features, while the militia boys from Jamestown, Mandan and Bismarck looked like the regulars in their marching and manners. The Ft. Yates and Valley City bands made the finest of music, and were applauded after each selection. Mayor McLaughlin's collection of Indian celebrities from Standing Rock agency, attracted the lion's share of attention from the crowd. Old Sitting Bull, just recovered from a long illness was the observed of all, and he wore a second-hand prince albert coat, moccasins and hair in curl papers with hear big dignity. The other famous chiefs of the Sioux, Gaul, Running Antelope. Hairy Chin, Mad Bear and others with their pouies, tents, squaws and papooses, composed a striking spectacle, the most noticeable contrast possible to the white citizens who now own and control the country which only a few years ago these very same large featured, dull mettled and savage people, steeped in ignorance, claimed and occupied as their own. They bore a banner in the procession which read "Dakota as a Territory," and every sight and sound around told the observer that Dakota was now a state. The camp of the Indians near the city was visited by hundreds during the day and evening, and quite a trade was carried on in selling pipes, tobacco bags, colored horse hair, &c.

The procession started near noon, headed by the bands, followed the infantry and cavalry, the delegates, and citizens, the territorial officers, judges, press, young ladies representing the 33 states. dressed alike, in red, white and blue, all riding ponies, and in the last row of these were four handsome girls dressed alike in white, with white plumes in their hats, representing the four new states of North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington. The fire companies nd Indians followed these, and the long procession, which reached nearly half way to the capital from the main street was closed by the militia boys.

During the afternoon the ball game between Bismarck and Mandan attracted the lovers of the game, and the horse racing, especially the Indian pony dashes, were exceedingly good, and greatly enjoyed. The people of Bismarck worked general sentiment was expressed that they fully succeeded. Every attention possible was given strangers, many had free dinners provided and on no occasion was any complaint heard for any overdid herself proud as the capital city and as an entertainer par excellence.

The press was taken in charge by ex-Governor Pierce who did the clever thing by the boys, and his efforts were certainly appreciated. The Press association met and elected officers and discussed work connected with the profession.

The Sheridan house fed a tremendous crush and Landlord Bly did every thing possible to make his guests comfortable and happy. They could not and did not complain.

The constitutional convention effected its temporary organization today. The presidency question was getting in a terrible tangle when King Caucus stepped in and straightened out the political skein. Four candidates were in the field yesterday. Miller of Cass, Fancher of Stutsman, Johnson of Nelson and Selby preparatory to being set in motion, and of Traill. Yesterday and last night the situation was chaotic. The friends of every candidate claimed the earth, and the supporters of Miller, who were notably vociferous, maintained that they had a fence around it. The question of how and when the caucuses should be held was the predominant one. The democrats got together and communed, but there was trouble among the adherants of the republican candidates. Some ner. were unwilling to trust their fate to a caucus and insisted on going into convention without one and making the fight nopen convention. They talked loud, but what strength they had could not be held together. They expected the nineteen democrats to vote for Miller in consideration of the concessions by him to Dave is a good fellow, popular, compecertain damands which the democrats made in the matter of the make up of the committees. The feeling was strong, however, that the convention should be republican caucus should select the man who should preside over the deliberations of the constitution framers. Eleven young republicans, among whom were E. W. Camp of Jamestown, John W. Scott of Valley City, S. H. Hoer of La-Moure, A. D. Flemington of Dickey and Republicans do the Organizing Dave Bartlett of Griggs, were determined that there should be a caucus, that the caucus should nominate a republi can for president and that the organization should be thoroughly republican. They were responsible for the candidacy of McHugh of Cavalier county, who was announced as in the field late last night. Their efforts resulted in crystalizing the repulican sentiment and brought the full republican strength into the caucus which was held this morning. The supporters of Mr. Fancher had all along been in favor of a caucus and had anncunced their willingness to enter one.

When the republican caucus finally met at the court house this morning, there were 53 member present. Only two republicans were absent-Whipple of Ramsey, who is seriously ill at Minne apolis, and Hoyt of Morton, who was over at Mandan. M. N. Johnson, of Velson, was chairman and J. W. Scott, of Valley City, secretary of the caucus. An informal ballot for nominee for presi dent resulted: McHugh 13; Miller Fancher 21; Johnson 6; Selsby 4; Williams 1. On the formal ballot, Mr Fancher received a majority, and was declared the unanimous choice of the caucus for president.

THE CONVENTION ASSEMBLED.

The convention assembled at the hall of the house of representatives, and at 12:15 Secretary Richardson rapped the gathering to order and read a short address to the delegates. Gov. Mellette performed a similar duty at Sioux Falls. The delegates quickly proceeded to the temporary organization. J. A. Rea, of Bismarck, was unanimously chosen temporary secretary; R. M. Tuttle, of Mandan Pioneer, temporary stenographer, and F. B. Fancher, of Jamestown, president, pro tem.

A committee on credentials, consisting of Rowe of Dickey, Miller of Cass, and Meacham of Foster, was appointed.

The following committee on perma nent rules for the convention, was also appointed by President Fancher:

Stevens of Ransom; Scott of Barnes; Colton of Ward; Bennett of Grand Forks; Turner of Bottineau; Camp of Stutsman; Slotton of Richland; Allin of Walsh; Appleton of Pembina, and Clark of Eddy.

The convention then adjurned until 10 a.m. tomorrow at which time the committees will report.

REPUBLICANS GETTING READY. The North Dakota half of the territorial republican committee met tonight, Chairman Allen calling the meeting to order. Considerable opposition developed at once over a scheme to apportion the delegates to the coming state convention on the basis of the republican vote for Delegate Mathews last fall. There were many strong reasons why this would be unfair. Cass county. by this apportionment, would be entitled to 35 votes in the convention. The basis of appropriation was fixed by the committee as one delegate at large for each organized county, and one delegate for each 200 of the total vote or major fraction. This gives 256 delegates to the conven tion; gives Statsman 9 delegates to 7, by the other scheme, and reduces Cass county's delegation, for instance, to 26. Of course there was kicking, but the boys from the big Red River county were handsomely recognized by being granted hard to please their visitors and the the first state convention to nominate republican candidates for the various state offices. The time of this convention was not fixed tonight, as there was a difference of opinion as to the length of the campaign deemed necessary to get out the full republican vote. Some members charging at any place. In fact, Bismarck | thought that a month after the convention was ample time to discuss the issues but an opinion prevailed that nothing ess than six weeks would do. August 14 or 21st will probably be the date fixed for the convention at Fargo, and the active campaign will open soon after that. It was stated that the demoerats would most likely put a ticket in the field this fall and a full time to combat it was what the republicans insist upon. Speakers would have to be sent to various parts of the territory, and a certain class of our population, instructed from the rostrum in their first political lessons. The committee will meet again tomorrow night to definitely fix the time for holding the state convention, and all the republicans now here attending the constitutional

Among the Jamestown people who at-

The caucus, as will be seen, did not at cempt to name the minor officers of the convention, and it is extremely probable that they will be selected tomorrow by the convention itself. There has been considerable talk about Bob Wallace for secretary, although he is not a candi-date for the position, and had Mr. Fancher not been chosen president, he would have been selected without much opposition. Waldo M. Potter is a canidate for the position, but Major J. Hamilton, of Grand Forks, who was the popular and efficient chief clerk of the ast legislature, will probably be the BISMARCK, July 5 .- [Special]-The convention assembled again at 10 o'clock this morning, but gained nothing thereby. When it adjourned at noon it was to meet again at two o'clock tomorrow. Little was accomplished today. The credential committe reported and the formality of ratifying the caucus program in the matter of the permanent president was gone through with. E. W. Camp presented the name of F. B. Fancher, the nominee of the republican caucus, and W. E. Purcell of Wahpeton, named Judge Carland of Bismarck. Fancher was elected, the roll call giving him fifty-two to Carland's seventeen, six being absent or not voting.

A committee on permanent rules was appointed and instructed to report the offices which the convention should fill. This committee consists of Williams of Burleigh; Parsons of Morton; Turner of Bottineau; Carland of Burleigh; Allin of Walsh; Stevens of Ransom; and Johnson of Nelson.

After the members had drawn their seats the convention adjourned.

The fight for the minor places of the convention has grown interesting since the presidency question was settled. The convention will not do much until they are chosen, but in all likelihood that will be tomorrow. A caucus will be tonight when the winners will be picked.

The republican territorial central committee met again this evening and after considerable discussion fixed the time for the convention to nominate state officers for August 21st. The place is Fargo.

President Fancher is experiencing the usual troubles of a presiding officer in making up his committees. It is a hard job to please everybody and he will probably so find it. They will be announced early next week.

The caucus to nominate minor officers was held this evening, but nothing was accomplished. It adjourned to meet to-morrow afternoon after the convention adjourns for the day. Most of the members took in a scrapping match between two local men.

There has been nothing said or done by any one in presenting Jamestown's invitation for the convention to adjourn and complete its labors in the Jim River metropolis.

After this week the presence of the onvention here will hardly excite a ripple of consequence. Most of the members have secured rooms among the private houses of the city. There is so little political significance attached to the convention's presence, that the politicians and candidates are keeping aloof rather than centering here. The crowd of this week will be in strong contrast to the smaller number of strangers hereafter.

Among the events that interested a arge crowd today, was a fine cavalry drill, given by Captain Fechet of Yates The well drilled horses and their beautiful evolutions were applauded by all who were strangers to the drill and minutely commented upon by the many grand rmy men present. In the prize fight at the Atheneum between a Bismarck colored man and a Menoken farmer, a white man, the latter was punched out of time on short order. The walloped would-be pugilist is a farmer lad who had absorbed sporting enthusiasm enough to make him think he was a fighter, and he had trained for the mill a couple of months, and put up $75 in cash that he could "do" the "nig-This money he earned at $20 a month. and now knows more than he did, about prize scrapping, and other things. MILITARY DISCIPLINE.

An exciting occurrence here this afternoon occupied for several hours the attention of army men, regular soldiers, militia and the promiscuous gathering of strangers. The Fort Yates military band was engaged in giving a complimentary concert, and was surrounded by a crowd of soldiers among the others, who were waiting to take the train for Mandan. A drunken private who had been creating disturbance all day and who had been twice reported for insubordination to his superior officers, refused to obey a command of Captain Fechet, the cavalry officer in command of the company. Sevbusily engaged looking after the wants eral times the private had been ordered to keep out of saloons and to sit down with his comrades on the platform. The man refused to obey, having a peculiar notion that no cavalry officer had any anthority over an infantry man, espec ially when the infantry man was full of Fourth of July ozone. The captain, a large and powerful man, lost his temper and seizing a musket from a soldier standing close by, dealt the obstreperous private a blow on the side of the head that felled him to the platform like an ox. The man's ear was cut in two and a large gash appeared across the scalp. For a while it was thought he was killed. but he soon revived and walked on board the train, which pulled out, leaving the captain in charge of a civil officer of the city. He gave bonds to appear on the fifteenth, and a special engine soon placed him in command of his company again. The crowd was strongly incense at the affair, and many threats of mob-law and lynching were made. The captain took it all coolly, and while no doubt regretting his haste, showed no nervous-ness at the hoots and execrations of an excited lot of people. Captain Gleason, of your place, soundly and excitedly denounced the action as cowardly, and his speeches were applauded by the soldiers and crowd particularly. Others held that the proper discipline of the occasion required the captain's prompt action, but few upheld the severity of the measure. For a few moments it looked as if an old pioneer day affair was about to be transacted in Bismarck.

BISMARCK, July 6.-[Special.] - Mr. Johnson, the defeated candidate for the presidency, seems to be one of those ordinary characters who are never satisfied unless occupying a position squarely within the focus of the public eye. The convention had scarcely forgotten that this man had a day or two since let every one know that he wanted the position of presiding officer of the body, and his presence was becoming less annoying, when he again found a means of attracting attention. His game was the antiquated hay-seed fake of attempting to withdraw the privilege of the floor from a newspaper man, never known to succeed, and he sprung it today immediately after roll call. McClure, of the Devils Lake Capital, was the intended victim. and these editorials constituted the of-

It is hoped that Ramsey county will not favor either Fancher or Johnson, for the presidency of the convention. Fancher is a politician, Johnson in sympathy, it is said, with the dynamite and bullet movement as a last resort. Give us Miller of Fargo.

The candidacy of M. N. Johnson, of Nelson county, for chairman of the constitutional convention does not meet with the sympathy of the people of this vicinity. Mr. Johnson is considered a little crankish on many subjects and is not fitted for the position. He has a brother in Fargo who is said to be a red hot anarchist, which is sufficient for a fair presumption that crank excentricities are a part of the family. A broad minded, well informed man should be chairman of the convention.

"And this the resolution—with charac teristic modesty introduced by Johnson

Resolved, That the privilege of the floor heretofore extended to all representatives of the press, be withdrawn from one Marshall McClure, of the Devils Lake Daily Capital.

McHugh, the diplomat from Cavalier county, discovered that the crime had been committed before the convention assembled and, applying some kind of a non-retroctive principal, which he ex-plained applied very clearly and especially to cases of this kind, moved that the resolution be tabled, which motion prevailed in a several to one ratio.

After this little diversion the committee on rules submitted its report, which after numerous motions, amendments and other parliamentary sparring, was adopted, so far as the offices were concerned and the consideratian of portion of it pertaining to committees postponed, the entire report being or-dered printed. Here the democrats, led by Purcell, attempted to get in a little piece of fine work by forcing an election of minor officers, knowing that the re publicans had not caucussed on the mat ter. But Mr. Camp checkmated the game by securing an adjournment.

KING CAUCUS.

The republican members at once met in caucus and after a spirited session these nominees were decided upon;

Chief clerk-J. G. Hamilton, Grand Sergeant-at-arms-Fred Falley, Wahpeton. Enrolling clerk-C. C. Bowesfield Ellendale. Stenographer-R. M. Tuttle, Mandac

Doorkeeper-George Wentz, Burleigh county. Messenger-J. D. Knight, Cass county. Watchman—J. S. Weiser, Valley City Chaplain—Rev. Geo. Kline, Bismarck Pages-Arthur Linn, Bismarck; Harry

Ward, Jamestown; Charles Lauder, Wah peton; and Charles Conroy, Mandan. REPUBLICAN APPORTIONMENT. The following is the apportionment agreed upon by the central committee for representation in the first republican state convention:

	Barnes 10	McLean
	Burleigh 7	Meintosh
5	Benson 4	Mercer
	Bottineau 5	Nelson
	Buford 1	Oliver
9	Billings 1	Pembina
ij	Cass 26	Pierce
1	Cavaller 5	Richland
i	Dickey 9	Ransom
	Eddy 4	Ramsey
	Emmons 3	Roulette
H	Foster 3	Stark
	Grand Forks 22	Stutsman
	Griggs 5	Steele
V	Hettinger 1	Sargent
ŝ	Kidder 3	Traill
	LaMoure 5	Towner
į	Logan 1	Walsh
	Morton 7	Wells
g	McHenry 3	Ward

The apportionment is a good one for the James River valley. Bismarck and Fargo papers "kick" on it because it takes 20 votes off the Red river valley and adds 18 to the valley of the James. The republicans of the latter region are not only justly dealt with, but the party at large, in the new state, will feel the good effects of this move, after election.

An Echo from the Hills.

Sheriff Clark Rorapaugh, of Deadwood, spent Saturday night in the city. He was on his way west on official business. Mr. Rorapaugh has been sergeant-atarms of the lower house of the Dakota legislature for a number of sessions past and was offered the same position with the Sioux Falls constitutional convention, but could not accept. This gentleman is fully alive to the fact that the Black Hills is the natural political ally of the broad-minded leaders of North Dakota, and that a rocky road lies ahead of the people in his district in their deals with the inhabitants east of the Missouri. He reports the greatest activit in the mining districts that the Hills have experienced for half a dozen years past, and of course everybody is in tensely hopeful—the hope that "springs eternal in the human breast," particularly in a mining region-no matter how nently and how often it is rewarded with disappointment.

Hyde, Jerauld, Bon Homme Kingsbury, Brookings, Lake, Lincoln, McCook, McPherson, Marshall, Charles Mix Moody, Potter, Roberts, Sanborn. Spink, Douglas Sully, Edmunds. Turner, Union, Walworth, Yankton, Sisseton Indian reserv The Second District of South Dakota is

POUNDING THE POOR INDIANS.

There's at least one Dakota man who hates the Indians. He writes occasional letters to the St.

Paul and other papers. He claims the average Dakota Indian is a government pet. His language has a sort of "sour grape" sound, but he tells the truth, as follows: Whenever a cut-throat Indian desires to go into farming our beneficent government gives him all the land he wants, Without a cent of expense to him; does not require him to live on it; buys all of the latest improved machinery, Gives him his seed and delivers it free on the farm and furnishes him blooded stock to run it.

If a white man wants a farm and it happens to be within forty miles of a land grant railroad-This same beneficent government requires him to pay $1.25 an acre for it to secure title. And, in addition, pay another $1.25 an acre for the land our congress donated to the railroads.

VALUE OF DAKOTA CROPS.

The entire soil products of Dakota in 1880 were valued at $5,649,000. Last year the wheat, corn and oats raised within our borders represented a valuation of a trifle less than $34,000,000, at the current market prices. If Dakota is not a good country, if her climate is not about right, if her soil is not the best, if life here is not endurable, how is it, you stump-dodgers of the East, that such wonderful progress is made in so short a time?

RENVILLE'S WASHINGTON TRIP.

Chief Renville, in behalf of the Indians on the Sisseton reservation, went to Washington about a week ago to see the proper authorities regarding the payment of annuities to the Indians be fore the reservation is opened for settlement. The big Indian could not see the president, and Secretary Noble was not at home. A visit was made to the Indian office, where assurances were given that the Indians would receive their dues. D. W. Diggs, of Milbank, piloted Chief Renville around.

GOOD PEOPLE TO LEAVE DAKOTA.

The Tacoma Ledger puts the following into the mouth of one G. H. Megquier, who claims to be from Pembina:

"You see, we come from Dakota, shade, and in winter it is 58 degrees below the cipher, consequently we can appreciate this country of vast resource This man may and may not be from Dakota. If he ever lived here, we are glad he is gone. His only accomplishment seems to be in the line of inventing stupendous falsehoods.

PROFIT IN SHEEP RAISING.

The Lanterman Bros., of Mandan, have already brought 16,000 head of sheep into Western Dakota from Montana. Dakotans are beginning to realize the profit found in raising sheep. The fleeces this spring were heavier than for several years, ranging from eight to fifteen pounds, from sheep running on the prairies without extra feed or care.

TO THE COITOR OF THE ALERT:-A run over to targo to the alliance meeting last weet brught to notice many things of interest. The sad condition of the crops adjacet to the railroad letween Jamestown and Fargo can but seriously discourage the farmers along the line, The most of them were beyond help by the recent ain. In the vicinity of the Dalrymple farms grain looked well for this season. Te farmers who had come up to the convertion from all over North Dakota had nothing encouraging to report about the cop prospects. The same was true of the few who came from South Dakota, Truly this is the season of Dakota's discortent; still the members were generally cherful. They seemed to be planning and figuring for the oc-

The farmers of North Dakota as represented in this convention are a fine looking body of men. They possess ability too. Many of the degates present may be properly termed shrewd. Their speeches on the various subjects which came before the convention were earnest. able and fearless. Many of them were polished. Several members of the constitutional convention had seats in the convention. Under the facile hand of President Loucks businesss was rapidly dispatched. Mr. Loucks made a forceable address in favor of the government loaning money to the people on ample security, at two or three per cent. The more the question was discussed the more feasable it seemed.

The convention declared in favor of the government owning the railroads and furnishing transportation at cost. The statement made by President Loucks that under government ownership of railroads, wheat could be transport. ed from Dakota to New York for six cents a bushel, instead of thirty cents, as now charged. President Loucks would make it appear that a saving of twenty four cents a bushel would accrue to the farmer of Dakota on the matter of freight. That would mean about $500 on 2.000 bushels of wheat. An animated discussion arose on the proper disposition to be made of the school lands by the state. A few favored leasing them. The majority changed the plank in the platform so as to read leased until sold." A lively discussion on the woman suffrage question was enjoyed by all. It was finally wisely decided to submit it to the people as a separate question, provided, of course, the constitutional convention thinks best. President Sprague of the Grand Forks University, delivered a an able and scholarly address before the convention at the court house Wednesday evening, on the subject of "Labor." He stated that in ante bellum times a male slave was valued at $1,000 to $2,000. He argued from that, that a white man would be worth $5,000, considered from a labor stand point. He readily reached a conclusion with these figures, that while the property valuation of North Dakota is $150,000,000 its brain and muscle are worth over $400,000,000. If a man comes into a community he adds

$5,000 value to that community. Perhaps the most important matter before the convention was co-operation between the Farmers' alliance and the Knights of Labor. A letter from Mr. Powderly was read. The idea was a comparatively new one to many of us. but the more it was shown up the better it looked. The Knights are becoming wiser than they once were. They have learned something by experience and defeats. The restless, striking element is falling back to the rear, while the well balanced heads are coming to the front. It is thought possible, even probable, that the farmers and the Knights will soon be working together. If that consummation comes to pass, they will present a strong front to monopolies, combinations and trusts. The Knights to look after important interests in cities and towns and the farmers to look after them in the country, would open the eyes of wrong doers. Chi Zeta Karl. Corinne, July 2.

The Local Slugger Failed to Appear.

The Killen Athletic Combination appeared before a fair audience last night, but Humes, the railroad man, who it was advertised, would endeavor to win the hundred dollar purse by standing up before the northwestern champion four rounds, failed to show up and, of course, the house was disappointed. The performance opened with a free for all set to between a couple of kids, which furnished considerable amusement but wasn't a brilliant exhibition of the manly art. Professor Anderson pounded Howser of Buffalo, all over the ring for four rounds, and then took copions doses of his own medicine when the champion became his opponent. He was not slow in returning these compliments, however, and this sparring contest was really an interesting exhibition. Mr. Killen is on his way to fight McAuliffe in San Francisco, but will show himself in numerous towns along the route. Some weeks since, he issued a challenge to the fist fighters of the world, barring none except the Australian coon, and his St. Paul admirers think that, before his career is finished, he will broaden the territory covered by his championship until it covers the continent, Boston and Baltimore not excepted. He is surely a giant of an Adonis and looks like he ought to "lick his weight in wild cats."

A pet fox in Bowdle, Dak., escaped from his owner's custody, and straight way began to make such havoc in neighboring hen roosts as would put the aver age colored gentleman to the blush. All the men and boys of the vicinity accord ingly organized a gigantic fox bunt. The joke came in when the fox, once unearthed, escaped, because everybody was afraid to shoot for fear of hitting some one of the crowd of hunters.

THE absolute unanimity with which resident editors, reporters and corresponents of Bismarck have been supporting the proposition for North Dakobody, and let one do the work, leads an outsider to conclude that some one masspecific object in view. If such is the the scribblers with something resembling a reason favorable to the governmental experiment, for thus far the aimless words advanced in its support serve only to bring out the folly of the suggestion in a painfully glaring light. For instance-"Two houses tend towards impeding legislation" are the catch words of all writers favoring the method. But when they suppliment this self evident fact with the statement, child like and professional lobbyist," even the most casual reader cannot help observing the absurd contradiction. The only way in which the two statements can be reconciled is upon the somewhat doubtful occupation will be gone for the reason that any cheap amateur can put a job through a single house, while it takes an adept to run the blockade of another bedy-after the weak, rotten points have been exposed. One correspondent, less cautious than the others in exposing his historic ignorance, pretending to trace the "custom" of dividing the legislative branch of governments into two bodies clear back to its origin, finds it in England and then whipsaws history by claiming that the framers of the United States constitution "borrowed" the plan from that government. Of course, no intelligent reader needs to be told that when our constitution was being constructed. so intense and rabid was the national prejudice against that country, that any policy, insitution or custom which was shown to be distinctively English, was at once, without any further consideration, condemned as unworthy of adoption by the budding republic. But this wise provision was a well founded principle of statecraft even before the Roman eagles were planted on what is now British soil.

There is no science older than that of government-astronomy itself, which naturally early attracts the expanding minds of primitive races, is an infant in comparison-and the few fundamental doctrines of this science have long since passed out of the unstable realm of speculation and become truths, as capable of conclusive demonstration as are mathematical propositions themselves. government, the law making body, not only needs the balancing power of the judiciary to keep it within the bounds of the constitution, but also certain checks upon its erring judgment. The executive veto is one, but in order to make this of sufficient potency, too much power would have to be placed in the hands of one officer, a single individual. And so, to obviate this serious difficulty, profoundly learned statesmen devised the plan of dividing the legislative power into two bodies, that they might guide and regulate and advise each other, that they migth thus enact wiser and more conservative laws for the government of themselves as well as others. Especially is it necessary that such a skillfully devised "impediment" be thrown in the way of legislation in a new, immature community like ours, where every variety of monomaniac is endeavoring to force the public to try the dangerous experiment of adopting his vagary. Yes, and in an age like onrs. too, when so many lightly sip and so few drink deeply at the Pierian spring. It would perhaps be as well for the North Dakota con. con., if it insists upon displaying original thought, to blaze out a new path through some less dangerous portion of the constitutional wilderness, and in matters so important as this, tread carefully the old, well beaten track, the wisdom of which ages of experience has demostrated.

W. T. COAD, the recently elected chaircentral committee, has been interviewed by a St. Paul reporter. He comes out dicts its defeat in the new state. And now some of the papers of eastern Dakota are crying to the new chairman in wild alarm to keep his mouth shut, suggesting that he add to his library Senator Quay's profound work on politics, "Don't Talk," and study it diligently. Mr. Coad is from the liberal, progressive Black Hills, and the wish of numself and constituents is evidently father to this belief. He thinks, and perhaps correctly, that the Hills will give a clear majority of 3,000 against prohibition. There is destined to be some wild, bitter sectional sides republicanism, and which was not in the city this evening, arriving on the

the big leaders of the mining region in the west. Mr. Coad doubtless "knows his business," however, and proposes to stand in with the constituents at home. The example of the eight older states of the union which have within the past two years decided against prohibition, ought to be before the constitution makers of North and South Dakota, like a pillar of fire by night, and a cloud by

THE science of 'irrigation is manifestly to be developed in Dakota, with the source of water supply from the artesian well system. For years the best known characteristics of this land have been its ta to abandon the ancient plan of fertility and aridity. It is a country of having two branches in the legislative extremes to the farmer, of good or ill, dependent on a season's rainfall. Irrigation has been for ages a problem ter mind is dictating this policy, with a with races of men. The successful water channels and tremendous aqueease, if there really is a mind behind the ducts of ancient countries have develscheme, it had better also try to furnish oped the ancient civilizations, about which the present century knows not ali. Ruins of stupendous waterways attest their uses in the past. Irrigation now must come under the attention of western progress, and the difficulties which surround it must be cleared away by western effort.

Hon. S. S. Cox, whose information on topics of this character is amazing, referred to this artesian irrigation problem in his recent Fourth of July speech at bland: "It will also do away with the Huron. He saw with his own eyes what the explorers Lewis and Clark had seen with theirs, what the Indian traditions were full of-a country whose crops were suffering from drouth. But Mr. Cox saw what no tradition tells, or explorer theory that the professional lobbyist's dreamed—the remedy for nature's backwardness surely indicated by the few slender water-spouts sent up with tremendous force from the great monster below. This remedy is the subterranean ocean, with its currents and confined pressure lying under the very soil that needs each prisoned drop. Touching upon this wonderful reservoir, pent up beneath the James River Valley and yet untapped for its destiny Mr. Cox says:

But yesterday your fruitful valley was whitened with the bones of the buffalo. Now it is an ideal farming area. It is a lesser Nile region, without its overflow. Artesian wells give water where the sun once made drouth perennial. The water-power of your matchless valley is as yet mmeasurable by ordinary mechanical standards. It is so prevalent that your people will utilize its specific gravity for the diversity of their industries. When its undiminished flow and steady pres-sure from the bosom of the earth are properly harnessed by mechanism, it will give its lucid lymph to make grasses for stock and lawns for beautiful homes. Its sunless currents, through the ingenuity of man, will enhance the rich soil by quenching its thirst. Fabulous are the wasted energies of your water power, as we count it by the standard horse-power of mechanics; but still more marvelous are the real energies of the soil which it would fructify.

The beautiful and fruitful valley of the James may not be as redolent of historic association and traditions as another James river of the colonel days; out deeper than historical or traditional incident are Dakota's pure springs under a magic more enchanting than that of Aladdın, which leap from your modern Artesium.

We can follow in fancy the thousands of miles of railroad bearing your gar-nered wealth of wheat, corn and flax to the seaboard; and see it like one great golded sheaf before which all the other sheafs of our commonwealth of Israe make obeisance without jealousy.

It is well for Dakota that a man of such influence as Congressman Cox realizes the greatest need of our new states, and it is doubly reassuring to hear that he proposes to agitate a government plan whereby each township in the arid west may be irrigated, to a certain extent at least, from the water supply underneath. One of the gravest duties of the government is the development of irrigation benefits for the people of the west.

THE republicans of North Dakota don't want to go into the coming campaign handicapped at the start with insufficient representation in the state conventions. The old methods of doing business, which prevailed as a territory, are about to be thrown off. A new era politically is opening for us. The customs of a life time cling tenaciously. however, and hope, long deferred, made many a good republican tired at the last election. As a very natural consequence, the party majorities in most of the connties were nothing compared to what they would have been, had any glimmer of the good news, which has since happened, dawned upon Dakota's long suffering, yet at heart, true republicans. For this reason they demand a fair field in the coming election and an unimpeded start. All the old political combinations, alliances and small local associations will man of the South Dakota republican sink into deserved obscurity with every good republican who has a chance for the first time in long years to walk up to flat-footed against prohibition, and pre- the polls and cast a solid republican vote for his party and its representatives. knowing that it will count one both at home and in the national councils, and express to his own satisfaction the faith and patriotism that are in him. For this reason the republican North Dakota central committee did a wise and generous thing when it based the representation in the state convention to be held August 21st at Fargo on a basis of population, and not on the party vote of last fall, which represented in every locality many issues and ideas be-statesmen of eastern South Dakota and strength in North Dakota. The wishes of a few ought to defer to many in an arrangment like this, and the objections of Cass county and, possibly one or two other counties, should not give the rule, where so important and so general a good is to be derived in the new state at

> THE cause of female suffrage is being anxiously watched in the constitutional conventions of Washington and the Dakotas. In Washington the friends of the measure are only fearful, that with the advent of statehood, their darling project will have a relapse.

In North Dakota the merits of the right of women to vote are being championed at Bismarck by a little old gentleman with silver hair, from Boston, who is representing, also, the Woman's Journal, organ and bellows for the suffragists. As a knight, he is not the spirited and dashing fellow we associate with a fighter for the ladies. No fierce, lance-shivering presence, no rush and shock of combat are in him. It is not believed either that any fair one, who deserved the honor, would, upon proper consideration, throw down the glove for decrepitude to contest her cause against manly vigor and soldierly dash in the lists; and certainly no such lady would feel a thrill in being crowned queen of love and beauty by a superanuated, though kindly Sir Knight.

The old man, it is feared, can do the ladies little good in our North Dakota. Some younger gallant, overflowing with strength and romantic enthusiasm. must respond to the bugler's call for a champion. Then will the girls have a chance for success.

In the organization of the Montana constituional convention the democrats appear to have had sway. There is something curious about it too, for all the dispatches endeavor to explain that the democrats should not be blamed for this; that they could not help it because the republicans adhered so closely to their ticket and candidate, and as the democrats happened to have the majority of delegates, they were compelled to elect their man.

This is all right. Let Montana be the only black sheep among the four, if she will, but let every republican in that territory get out and rustle a contest with the enemy first. The republicans were correct in chalking off a line to stand by.

In the organization of Washington's convention, real estate, capital matters and the spoils of victory seem to overshadow every other consideration. It has not been stated even, whether the chairman was a democrat or republi can, and party interest seems lost in the further inflation of their boom balloon.

The two Dakotas seizing upon the principal political point, which is one ofboth national and local importance, organized on a straightout party line, and republican is its name.

THE English wheat buyers, according to Mr. G. Ste Croix, who attempted to organize an elevator company in America last fall, are getting a little anxious about our hard wheat crop. The shortage is not pleasant to contemplate over here where the excellent qualities of our wheat are becoming more and more widely known each year. Ste Croix writes to friends in this country that he will be in Duluth about July 15th, and during the marketing season, and will be prepared to place at the disposal of North Dakota wheat growers, a complete system of connections which will bring them into direct communication with the English wheat buyers, and asks for communications from the farmers on this

If this can be accomplished in spite of the hedging in with difficulties which the American elevator companies will be sure to attempt, the plan is worth the consideration of every grower of wheat in the new state. Our wheat is worth more than is paid for it, every farmer knows it, and a little business with this English agent might have a salutary effect on the home market.

THE coming legislatures of North Dakota will be composed mostly of young men. They will have other projects in hand, than those of experimenting with women's suffrage, prohibition and other chimerical reforms, that the wisdom of the older states have repudiated. There is work ahead, not dalliance, for North Dakota legislatures.

The distinctive field for the cultivation of vagaries in legislation lies to the south of us, in South Dakota. There the overflow of population from Iowa gives a hope for success to the authors of many of the wildest of measures; and the next few years are likely to see some of them in full force and effect.

THE first North Dakota republican state convention will meet August 21st at Fargo. It will be, in point of numbers, interest and importance, the most notable political gathering yet held in North Dakota and the future political wellfare of the new state will be there begun under an auspicious republican censor-

No single individual accomplished as much for Dakota in its fight for division and admission as did Hon. S. S. Cox, of New York. He was our intelligent friend from start to finish. He will be warfare between the small hay-seed a true and just standard of republican laine o'clock train from the south, and will doubtless accept the invitation which will be extended him to make an impromptu talk to the public. Jamestown's citizens shoud turn out in full force and show the distinguished gentleman that they delight to honor that sentiment of justice so wisely displayed by himself, with total disregard for political preference.

Ir the republican central committee make any change in the date of the state convention, it has been suggested that the 2Sth of August instead of the 21st will be the time most desirable. This is North Dakota's convention, and she should run it to suit herself. An earlier date, it is claimed, would give a lot of South Dakota politicians a chance to meddle with business not her own. South Dakota holds her convention the 28th and Candidate Loux would naturally be compelled to stay at what he claims as his home, although he really lives, the boys say, in Minneapolis, and not in either of the Dakotas.

OUTSIDERS must keep hands off North Dakota matters from now on. South Dakota politicians are decidedly outsiders on this side of the parallel.

WITH Kilrain, the whole nation now breathes easier.

Soaps in which 'free alkali' is present are decidedly injurious to both the clothing and the skin when habitually used. On July Fourth Jas. Bowman and a man unknown to the writer fought fifteen rounds to a finish in a sixteen foot ring, according to London priza ring rules, Mr. Geo. McIver acting as referee The contest was a hot one, lasting forty-five minutes and ten seconds. It was undoubtedly one of the most sporting like combats which ever occurred in North Dakota. Both men were game to the back bone, but the battle ended in a victory for the former. The trouble seemed to have orginated from an argu ment as to who had the best looking girl. The mill began with very light sparring and continued so for the two The third round the latter forced the fighting by landing a right hander on his antagonist's nose, causing the claret to flow, and driving him to his corner. Time being called up to the tenth round, the latter seemed to force the fighting most, invariably sending out some tremendous blows, but failing to reach their destination, through the scientific art of boxing, which the former seemed to possess. In the last rounds both men forced the fighting vigorously, the former forcing his oponent to the ropes with some stunning blows. The fourteenth round the latter was knocked out completely by a left hander catching his lower jaw. Time was called on the fifteenth round and the latter being unable to leave his corner, was taken from the ring by his friends much to their surprise, as they had confidently figured on an easy victory. The receipts were handed over to Bowman. Both men are highly respected by all who know them

Grain is improving fast since the rain; the showers since have kept it bright.

A remarkable phenomenon was lately observable, to which the attention of the Smithscnian institute is called. As the hot, dry weather caused the wheat to turn yellow, the people began to get blue, and the yellower the wheat became the bluer they looked! A case, seemingly, of reflex action.

THE RIOTS AT DULUTH.

No Further Outbreak Has Since Occurred.

nition Forwarded from St. Paul-Militia Out.

DULUTH, Minn., July 9.—A riot such as has hardly a parallei in the Northwest occurred here last Saturday afternoon. Last Tuesday 1,500 street laborers went on a strike for $1.75 a day, and ever since they have been spoiling for the police, because the latter has hindered them from stopping other more favored laborers. Friday there was a brush between the strikers and the police, but no harm was done. Saturday two were killed outright and three more injured fatally, while fully fifteen others were quite seriously injured. The police were expecting further trouble and a squad numbering twenty-three were patrolling

The First Assault

Occurred at about half past 4 o'clock, when the strikers began throwing stones at the officers. The officers, who had formed in two squad in front of the Peterson and Knights of Labor blocks, commenced firing with revolvers right and left. This volley was returned by a fusilade of shots from the strikers. Shots continued to be exchanged for fully thirty minutes, showing that the Strikers Were Well Armed. The police stood their ground, but their opponents were scattered and fired from all directions. A band of nearly 100 were fortified behind the breastworks of dirt which had been thrown up from the sewer, and at every opportunity they would jump up and fire at the police, who made a good target and at very short range. The police kept up a con-stant fire toward the strikers who were on Superior street, and with deadly effect. One man, named George Peter son, who was standing near the police on Michigan street, was endeavoring to make short work of officer Hayden, when a blow from the latter's club

He was picked up by another spectator, and in another moment the latter had a finger shot off. Ed Johnson, who came here from Michigan just six days ago, had run forward from Superior street to throw stones at the police. He turned and when nearly a block away was shot through the brain by a bullet from a rifle in officer Benson's hands. House for two blocks were simply riddled with bullets, a pane of glass in many in-stances having a half-dozen holes. The police after a while were reinforced by Company K. state militia, which did good work in clearing the streets.

It was said to be stored near the street car barns, but careful search failed to discover any trace of the explosive.

Arms Sent to Duluth. St. Paul, July 9.—Fifty needle guns from the St. Paul police armory, with 1,000 rounds of ammunition, and fifty double action, 44-caliber Colt's revolvers, with 1,000 rounds of cartridges, have been sent to Duluth by Chief of Police Clark in response to telegrams from Mayor Sutphin.

DULUTH, Minn., July 10.—Business in Duluth was at a standstill all day, and and the streets were crowded with men anxious to read the latest bulletins regarding the strike. At noon excitement, aroused by fear, had gone to such a pitch that about 100 of Duluth's best business and professional men met in the board of trade, chose officers, and formed themselves into a voluntary police force. Then for an hour they drilled on the board. They will be furnished with rifles whenever necessary, but it is not likely that there will be any further trouble, as the military, police and sheriff's contingent can take care of everything.

Tom Fitzsimmons and Matt Mack have died, making three strikers dead, all told. Peterson cannot live many hours longer. Zan, a Frenchman, who was wounded in the head, is also ex-

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 10.-Freight train No. 13 on the Pennsylvania railroad was wrecked at Wilmerding a few miles east of here. Thirteen cars were derailed. The train caught fire. A car load of whisky was the cause of the fire becoming ignited from some unknown cause. Two bodies have so far been removed from the wreck and it is said that six or eight more, at least, are in the debris. Twenty-five people were on the train according to a statement made by a tramp who escaped. Of this number it is known that ten or a dozen escaped. The train hands say that fifteen were killed. A colored man sustained serious injuries. The thirteen cars and engine are wholly wrecked. The accident was caused by an axle breaking. A full list of the dead and wounded has not been obtained as yet.

Dervishes the Victima. CAIRO, July 10.—The government is in receipt of advices that the Egyptian force under Col. Wodehouse arrived at Adenden late Monday afternoon. The dervishes appeared on the opposite bank of the river almost simultaneously with the arrival of the Egyptians and attempted to obtain a supply of water. A fierce artillery and rifle fire was opened upon them, but despite this they managed to get a partial supply of water under cover of their own fire, which was so sharp and well directed that several Egyptians were killed and wounded.

Dickinson Press: The Indian camp on the river between the two slaughterhouses is, just now, a have of industry and bustle. The squaws are busily engaged in hanging, stringing out and drying cattle entrails, of which they receive an abundant supply at the slaughter pens. One old chief says he expects some of their paleface Indian Rights Association friends from the east to come out and dip into the soup.

EXHAUSTIVE.

The smoking room of a transatlantic steamer is the greatest place in the world for stories. On every trip there is always some one who has a special gift in that direction. The last time I went across there was a Mr. Scott on board who told us some of his wonderful adventures. One day he said:

"I never take passage on a steamer until the very last moment."

"Why is that?" some one asked. "I should think you would sometimes run the risk of not getting a good room."

"Oh, I don't mind that," answered Mr. Scott, "what I am anxious about is to avoid Hobbs.

'Who's Hobbs?" three or four asked

Well, it's plain you never met him or you wouldn't have forgotten him. Hobbs is an inventor, who turns his intellect towards marine improvements. The first time I met him he was crossing over trying to get his patent nonseasickable berth adopted. The steamship company had refused to put in the berths, but allowed him to go on the steamer and put in a berth if a passenger wanted it in. The consequence was that Hobbs made life a burden for all of us. Some ordered in the berths in order to get rid of his canvassing and explanations. The improvement generally made them so seasick that they slept the rest of the voyage on the sofa. It was an oscillating affair, and the chances were that if you did succeed in getting into it the thing would pitch you out on the floor before morning. We worried through that trip, but my next voyage with Mr. Hobbs was a terror. As a general thing I have a room to myself when I cross, but this time I found that some one else was to be in with me. The first day out I came down to my room and found it filled up with all sorts of paraphernalia, so much so I could hardly enter. Some one was in the upper berth and was stretching himself half way

'Hello!" I cried. "What the deuce are you up to? I want you to understand across the room tacking canvas to the

that this is my room."
"Mise, too," cried the other fellow, with his mouth full of tacks. Then looking down at me he dropped the tacks on the floor and shouted gleefully, "Hello, Scott! That you? Well, this is luck. I didn't know but I would have some stranger with me this time, so I hurried to get through with my little plan before he could object."

He was so covered with dust that at first I did not recognize him, but as he jumped down I saw with horror that it was Hobbs, and I felt sure that I would

"What is all this anyhow? Some new improvement on the berth?"

"No. I've been studying this thing since I have been over here, and I find that it is not the motion of the vessel that causes seasickness at all. No. sir. It is the foul air. You have noticed that when passengers stay on the deck they are not half so bad as when they remain in their staterooms. Now there is just as much motion on deck as in the stateroom, so it is evidently not the motion that makes the difference. Now what is it? Why it is the fresh air. That's the whole secret. I've perfected an exhaustive apparatus which will keep the state rooms and cabin as pure as the deck outside. Like all great inventions it is very simple. All we have to do is to exhaust the air and there you are.'

The first four days out we had an awful time. Hobbs worked at that thing night and day. There was no rest for me, all the time he was at it. Hetalked incessantly. He wanted to fix it so that only a certain amount of fresh air would get in, and he had arrangements for stopping drafts and preventing the foul air from the rest of the ship getting in, and all that sort of thing. At last one night—the fifth night out—he announced that everything was completed and that he would get the pump attached that night or next day. I fell into a troubled slumber, and some time in the night wakened up with a strange feeling of oppression. I found it almost impossible to breathe. I lay there panting for a few moments, not knowing what was the matter with me. The air seemed as rarefied as at the top of a mountain. All at once I recognized a new sound. It was a sound of suction, and the whole situation flashed on me. Hobbs had started his infernal machine and it was drawing all the air out of the room. It was exhausting the air faster than the crevices let it in.

I knew that if I was to save my life I must act quickly. I sprang from the berth and struck a match. It glimmered for a moment and then went out. There was not enough oxygen in the room to allow it to burn. Then I thought of the electric light. That, at least, was independent of air. I groped around for the knob and turned it on. Hobbs was sleeping peacefully in the upper berth. I tried to open the door, but it was locked, and I saw with dismay that the key was not there. To make sure of his murderous experiment, Hobbs had hidden the key. At that moment a wild desire to murder Hobbs seized me. I forgot that he must necessarily suffer the same fate as myself. I reached up and grabbed him by the arms and flung him on the floor with a crash that ought to have broken every bone in his body. I sprang on him, and, with both hands, gripped his throat, pounding his head against the carpeted floor with all the energy of des-

"Hobbs, you villain," I yelled, "where is the key?

"Wh-wha-what key?" gasped the awakened man between thumps.

"The door key-you know what key." "1-I-never saw it," stuttered Hobbs. Then it occurred to me that I had better leave Hobbs to the fate he had prepared for himself and save my own life if possible. I gave his head one farewell thumpand then flung myself on the floor and breathed through the aperture under the door. The cool air from the outside was very comforting to an exhausted man. I heard Hobbs getting slowly up, muttering to himself. He sat down on the sofa, apparently to think over things. "Look here," he said at last, "if you're quite through with me I'd like to go back to bed again." "Bed," I cried. "You'll be a dead man inside of five minutes. There is no air in this room. Your idiotic exhausting machine has"—

"Then open the door; it isn't locked, it's bolted.

I unbolted the door and it came open all right. As there was no rush of cold air, I began to feel that I had not been as wide awake as I thought I was had a suspicion, too, that I had not acred in a gentlemanly manner toward Hobbs: "I'm afraid I've been dreaming, Hobbs," I said, apologetically.

"Oh, no," replied Hobbs, "you're merely stark crazy, that's all. You think this ship is a lunatic asylum. Now, if this sort of matinee is going to occur every day or so you'll excuse me it I prefer to sleep in the lower bunk. It isn't so far to fall."

"Thus it is," concluded Mr. Scott, that I always try to avoid Hobbs. "I know one man who will be grateful for your avoidance," said a smoker. "Who's that?" asked Scott. "Hobbs."-Luke Sharp in Detroit Free

In the evening, weak and weary Entered I the sleeping car; Found the porter haughty, dreary As at eve the porters are.

Up and down the aisle he bossed me, Flung my baggage here and there: In my every wish he crossed me Till my soul o'erflowed with swear.

Long I sued, implored, beseeched him, "Give me quarters for the night, Till at last my pleadings reached him And he folded me from sight

A FEARFUL ORDEAL.

Occupying a seat in the reading room of a down town hotel one day last week, says a writer in The Alta California, there might have been observed a seemingly aged gentleman, whose hair was gray and whose cheeks were shriveled. A pallor as of death was on his face, and frequently the muscles of his features would twitch convulsively. His name was Richard J. Allen, and he registered himself as hailing from Toronto, Canada.

Five years ago Richard Allen, or Dick Allen, as he was familiarly known by his associates, owned, or at least claimed and occupied, a stock range of considerable area in southern Arizona, the Mexican boundary line being distant but a few miles. He owned a large number of beef cattle and was considered well to do.

Among the rough population of the border Allen was a power. He was most generously gifted by nature, having a well knit, athletic frame, and a mind well stored with knowledge. But it was Allen's nerve which secured for him recognition and affluence amid the cactus flecked plains of Arizona and New Mexico-a nerve which knew no flinching, even in the face of death. The greasers and Indians soon learned to dread the tall stockman, for in more than one encounter they had come off badly worsted, and more than one unmarked grave on the Mexican frontier bears silent witness to Allen's unerring aim, for he never hesitated to kill when he thought himself justified. Very little is considered justification among the class with which Allen was associated. So greatly was he feared and respected by his wild companions and neighbors that nothing bearing his brand was ever molested, and the most daring of the cowboys and outlaws seldom tempted death by a too prolonged argument with him.

As an illustration of his iron nerve, it may be related that at one time in 1884 he was given warning to keep away from a certain small settlement, some ten miles from his ranch, he having incurred the displeasure of a gang of notorious cutthroats there. Allen smiled grimly as he read the warning, then strapped on his revolver and set forth for the hostile hamlet. He tied his horse in the rear of a saloon and started to enter. when a pistol shot was heard and a bullet whistled over his head. Allen turned. Not more than twenty feet away stood "Dan," a half breed Indian, with a revolver in his hand. As Allen turned three more balls passed in close proximity to his head. He knew the Indian had one shot left. With a scornful smile he said, "Fire again, you ---, and fire

The Indian did so, and the next instant his spirit had left the arid plains of Arizona forever. Then Allen strode into the saloon where at least a doze of his enemies were gathered, and demanded to know who sent him the warning. No one answered, and after roundly cursing the gang for their cowardice, he left and went home. For two months he battled hard with death, for the last bullet fired by the Indian had lodged in his right breast, almost piercing the dung.

It was some three months after this occurrence that Allen met with a mishap that hurled him from the heights of a sturdy manhood to an existence but little removed from death. It was in the summer of 1885. All day long Allen had been hard at work branding a lot of yearling steers, at a point some twenty miles from his dugout, and at night he was completely worn out. It was a wearisome gallop from the branding place to his cheerless habitation, for the air was sultry and the baked ground gave forth an intense heat.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when the stock man reached his destination, and glad was he when his pony was safely stabled for the night and he at liberty to retire. He was about to creep into be when his quick ear detected a sligh moise in the direction of his stable, and he knew at once that prowlers were about. Seizing his revolver, he started for the stable on his hands and knees. for he intended to kill and not to alarm. having no garment on other than his undershirt. The noise at the stable continued, and Allen moved rapidly toward the sound. So intent was he on investigating the noise that he failed to notice where his path led him, and suddenly without warning, he felt something beneath him give way, and he was precipitated to the bottom of a "played out well, a distance of some twenty-live feet The well had been dry for years, and the mouth had been closed with a few rotten boards, which, giving way under Allen's great weight, had caused the catastrophe.

For a moment Allen was stunned. The skin on his body had been abraded in a dozen places, and every bone ached with the force of the fall. The stockman was almost overwhelmed with rage, for in this accident he saw himself rendered helpless, and knew the thieves, if any there were, would not leave as much behind as a lariat, and might, should they discover his position, kill him. With a muttered curse of despair he turned to look for his revolver, determined to fight to the last, should an atbe new gleaming and flashing in the murky darkness a pair of small, beady eyes, and poor Allen's heart almost stood still, for a warning his and rattle told him he had in the well as a companion a rattlesnake. The reptile rattled angrily. and moved his head from side to side in an uncertain way, and then behind Allen there came an answering sound, and he knew he had two reptiles to cope with instead of one.

The snake behind him soon crossed the well and joined its mate, the two meanwhile keeping up an incessant rattle. Their slumbers had been rudely to resent it if possible.

Allen stood as if petrified. He knew a movement on his part meant an attack, and this attack to him must result in death. And such a death! He imagined himself bitten by the snakes, and his fancy depicted a frenzied being, with veins filled with burning poison, wildly grappling with the scaly, venomous reptiles, and striving with the desperation of the awful fever to mount the hard sides of the well and die on the plain above beneath God's smiling stars. The sweat poured from the poor man's body in streams. The snakes gave forth that musky odor peculiar to them, and this, taken with the closeness and warmth of of the air, produced a sensation as of suffocation.

In a moment, still hissing angrily, one saw its glistening eyes at his feet. The creature seemed to like the warmth of Allen's body, and stopped for a moment. Then it slowly began to ascend his limbs to his body, and soon the terrible eyes were looking into those of Allen, and they seemed to burn through to his brain. Up over his face the creature moved its head, and then encountered Allen's crisp hands sooner than be riddled must want and curly hair. With an angry rattle the snake drew back his head, and Allen, knowing it would strike, raised his hands as quick as lightning and gripped the creature by the throat. With the other hand he grasped the rattles, and then he slowly, surely strangled the creature to though the fearful effluvium which it emitted almost caused him to faint. For half an hour he held the snake firmly; he saw the malignant light in its eyes grow dim and finally disappear, and then he knew one enemy at least was dead. But he dared not drop the dead snake, for the other had become uneasy at the disappearance of its mate and seemed on the point of starting out in search. The fierce, glaring eyes moved from side to side, the rattle was seldom still, and Allen never for a moment took his eyes from those hostile

For hours he stood thus, consumed with a feverish thirst, his nerves at a terrible tension, and his eyes strained and almost bursting. Then the sky above him began to light up, and a little ray of sunlight danced on the western wall of his underground prison. In a few moments the well was quite light, and then Allen and his remaining enemy saw each other at the same instant. The snake coiled and sprang, but Allen was too active. He stepped to one side and let the snake go by him, and then, with a small club, crushed out the venomous life forever. Then it was that Allen's great nerve gave way. He yelled and shrieked and cursed and tore in a mad delirium; and when neighbors, attracted by his cries, rescued him an hour later, he was frothing at the mouth, bleeding at the nose and the snakes were torn to shreds.

For weeks he lay in his cabin on the outer edge of death, but his sturdy constitution stood by him, and he recovered, though he was but a wreck of his ahead and hang. former self. His neighbors "rounded thieving residents of the frontier were quick to take advantage of his helplessness-and Allen left for New England, to recover, if possible, his former health. But the shock was too severe, and Allen will never be a man again. At the age of 36 he is as infirm as a man of 70, and his life is devoid of pleasure. He cannot remain long in one place, for his nerves demand a constant change of scene, and he is a homeless, helpless wanderer. Soon death will come to his relief, and then, perhaps, Allen will learn why this dreadful plague was visited upon him.-Boston True Flag.

A MISTAKEN IDENTITY

Four or five mules had been stolen in and about Glen Cove, and the thief had been sharp enough and lucky enough to get off with them. The mountain people lose a razor backed hog now and then and raise no row; but when a thief has the nerve to come along and run off a mule the situation assumes a serious aspect. The bulwarks of American libdisturbed and they seemed determined lerty totter to their foundation, as it were, and it is high time that the American eagle be unchained and encouraged to scream his loudest. Every farmer in the Cove was out at night and on the watch, and although they may have differed on religion and politics, all were agreed as to what should be done with the thief in case he returned after more mule meat and was captured. The above can be imagined as scene first. Scene second opens with your humble servant approaching Glen Cove at 10 o'clock of a starlight night. If I could have had my way about it I should have done the approaching act several hours earlier: but a towheaded boy who was carrying 50,000 freckles on his face gave me a wrong steer on a short cut, and I was lost for two or three hours. I had heard nothing of the excitement at of the snakes began to move, and Allen the Cove, and felt no fear except of the farmer's dogs. The first building I came clammy thing crawled over his bare feet to looked to me like a large log house, and circled around his naked legs. The and I turned off the trail and approached it. I was close up before discovering that it was a barn. I was about to turn away when several men stepped into view and a hearty voice sung out:

I didn't attempt any tricks, and when they had tied my hands behind me and fastered a leading rope around my body. the leader said:

"We'll take him down to Crocker's and see if Jim's boy kin identify." There were five sturdy mountaineers, each armed with a gun, and I wasn't saying a word. I realized the situation by the help of some remarks dropped as we passed along, and 1 felt that it was useless to protest until the proper moment came. About ten rods below Crocker's house was a fine, large tree. and as we passed it the leader of the band remarked: "We'll dangle he'un from that ar' limb up thar'. It was a nice, large limb, growing at a convenient height, and I would no doubt present a good appearance while doing the dangling act.

What may be called scene third took place at Crocker's. A gun was fired as we arrived, and in the course of a quarter of an hour five more farmers arrived. They had been out on watch also, and this was the signal to rally. It was while waiting for this rally that I asked one of those who had captured me:

"Do you suspect me of any crime? Are you looking for a robber or murderer?" "Suspect! In course we suspect!" he eplied.

But isn't it possible that you have nade a mistake?

"Reckon not: but we can soon find out. Crocker's boy Jim got a fa'r sight of e'un by daylight, and he'll tell.'

Great was the rejoicing when the up" what little stock he had left-for the party arrived. Not a man of them had the least doubt that I was the party wanted, and two of them insisted that raluable time could be saved by hanging me at once. 6

Crocker's boy Jim was a lad of 12, and no sooner laid eyes on him than I felt a presentiment of evil He had been outed out of bed to identify me as the person he had seen hiding in the woods on the day the last mule was stolen. He made short work of it. He looked at me for ten seconds and then said:

"He's he'un! I'll sw'ar to it on forty Bibles!"

"Dead shore?" asked the leader.

"Yes." "That's 'nuff! Up he goes!"

It was high time for me to do some talking I told them who I was, the 400 route I had come, the people I had met. and I asked them to look over my papers. They said it would be throwing time away, and that it was selfish in me to want to delay matters, and I guess they would have had their way about it but for Mrs. Crocker As they started to lead me out doors she said:

"Look ye.s, boys, don't make no mistake. Our ... may hev mistook. He'un tells a smooth story, and it may be right. It hain't but fo' miles back to Dobson's, whar' he says he took supper, and one of ye should ride over.

The men grumbled and growled, but it was finally decided that one of them should go. I was seated on a rude stool, the rope tied fast about my legs, and we sat there to await the return of the messenger. Jim was questioned again and again, but he stuck to his first declaration. The latter had bragged of his cuteness, and his defeat annoyed him. He went off shaking his head and predicting that I was up to some trick. I had forgotten the boy when, half an hour after breakfast, I heard a terrible racket behind the corn crib. Word came that I was wanted, and I went out to find Jim tied by the leg and his father trimming the second "gad."

"Now, sonny," said the father as he got ready to use it, "take a good look at that 'ere stump befo' ye. The Wonderful Ways of French Thieves. That mournful establishment, the morgue, was surrounded by a howling and angry mob yesterday. The burglars who plundered the villa at Auteuil the other night and cut the throat of the caretaker of the house were taken to the morgue for the purpose of the usual "confrontation" with the corpse of the victim, and as they were entering and leaving the dead house the people roared and made ineffectual dashes at them. M. Guillot, the juge d'instruction, had arranged an extra dramatic bit of business for the occasion, having brought down to the mortuary Mme. Bourdon. the mother of the man who had been murdered by the burglars. The magistrate had done this for the purpose of making an impression on the miscreants, who are all hardened in crime, and whom the mere spectacle of a dead body would not move.

Allorto, the Italian, who was captured the night of the burglary, was the first prisoner examined at the morgue. He said that when he and his confederates went into the drawing room of the villa they saw Bourdon pretending to be fast asleep on his iron cot. Thereupon they danced around him, and Cathelin, one of the gang, said, "Your last hour has come, old chap!" and struck him several times in the face with his fists and then with a burglar's chisel. Allorto, according to his own account, made Bourdon turn pale and green by screwing his wrist in a vise, but the victim still affected to be asleep, and a burglar named Sellier the Manchot then said, "We must finish him off," and stabbed him several times in the chest and stomach After that the band began to dance, Cathelin and the fellow nicknamed the Manchot intoning the popular ditty, "Pere la Victoire." Finally Cathelin, who, as Allorto said, is "a bit stage struck," suggested that all the burglars should place their candles around the dead body as in the scene in Sardou's "Tosca."-Paris Letter.

WHAT ARE TRUFFLES?

SOMETHING ABOUT THE MUSH-ROOM'S UNDERGROUND COUSIN.

A Member of the Fungi Family That Tickles the Palate of the Epicure-How They Grow and Are "Caught"-Attempts at Cultivation Unsuccessful.

Probably few of the thousands of people who have enjoyed these culinary dainties are aware of the manner in which they grow or the circumstances in which they are obtained. Others, again, who have perchance never encountered truffles or met with them in the bill of fare or upon the menu of the dinner table-for they are not sufficiently plentiful to be a popular article of diet-will have but a confused idea as to what denomination they belong, such confusion being heightened by reason of the term 'catching" or "hunting" being used to denote the means by which they are obtained. It is, therefore, not unnecessary to explain that truffles are underground fungi, those which are the subject of commerce belonging to the genus "tuber," whilst others which bear the name are of related though different genera. In England they were formerly known as "trubbes," both names being doubtless derived from the Latin terræ tuber. They are somewhat oblong or globose, and vary in weight from a couple of ounces to several pounds, according to the species, locality and the circumstances in which they are grown. They vary somewhat in color; some are white, but generally they are of a black or dark brown color, and of a rough exterior, the skin being thickly covered with wartlike protuberances. When cut through with a knife, they present a different appearance from that of any other fungus. Veins traverse the mass in all directions. giving a marbled character that is a distinctive feature of the truffle. When closely examined, minute sacs will be noticed in the veins. These contain spores, which are covered with spines. DOGS AS TRUFFLE HUNTERS.

Not much is known of the early development of the truffle, owing principally to its peculiarity of growing underground, where it is free from observation; but when found in the mature state, in which they are used for food, they are altogether free from attachment, either to the ground or to any other body. They are commonly, if not invariably, found in woods, the pres-ence of oak or beech trees appearing to favor their growth. From this fact it has been inferred that they are of a parasitical nature, and that at some stage of their existence they derive their nutriment from the roots of trees. Light calcareous soils are those which most frequently produce truffles, and in England they are chiefly obtained from the hill districts and chalky grounds of Hants and Wilts. Those, however, which chiefly supply the English markets are brought from France or Algiers.

Trufiles emit a fragrant odor both during their growth and after they are gathered. It is this characteristic which favors their acquisition, as, being buried out of sight, some other faculty has to be employed to discover their presence. For this purpose the keen sense of smell in the dog is taken advantage of, and dogs are systematically trained for the purpose of "truffle hunting." This service is sometimes performed by pigs on the Continent. The dogs are trained by the device of hiding a truffle and rewarding the dog each time he discovers its place of concealment. By degrees he dog soon learns to search in the woods, attracted by the perfume, and scratches at the spot under which reposes the hidden fungus. He is then rewarded by a piece of bread, and the truffle is carefully exhumed. The "catching" or "hunting" of truffles is a regular means of employment for men and dogs in those districts in which the fungi exist in sufficient quantities to render the work remunerative.

HOW TO PREPARE THEM The attempts at artificial reproduction or cultivation of the truffle have not been successful, as mycelium or spawn, from which other fungi (such as mushrooms) are readily produced, has not yet been obtained. Success has occasionally attended the sprinkling of suitable ground with water in which the fresh peel of truffles has been steeped.

The odor and flavor of truffles are most distinctive, and the delicacy of this flavor is highly esteemed by cooks, these fungi being generally employed for flavoring meats. The fresher truffles are used the better, as they lose their perfume by exposure to the air. Thus, English truffles which reach the market fresh gathered are preferable to those obtained from abroad: and those, again, which are deeper in the ground are superior to those found near the surface, possibly owing to the same reason-viz.: that they have been better protected from access of air.

To cook truffles, they should first be DIRECT LINE TO WATERTOWN, DAKOTA. well washed-if necessary scrubbed with a brush-in warm water, rinsed and then boiled (according to size) from two to three hours. They may be served, hidden in a napkin, as if they were chestnuts. They are eaten at the second course, dry, with cold butter. The game is eaten with them, and the crisp peel is not discarded. Some people boil truffles in champagne, under the impression that they acquire the flavor of the wine. This is a most extravagant and useless custom, as, in the first place, the toughskin of the truffle is quite impervious, and secondly, the wine, directly it is heated to boiling point, loses all spirit and flaver. If it is desired to put truffles into a salmi, boil them separately, then peel and cut them up when the dish is ready, then over all pour the gravy or sauce. They should also be cooked separately if intended for insertion into a boar's head or for combination with the stuffing for a turkey. In the latter case they should be peeled and introduced with the stuffing.-London Queen.

Devils Lake News: The Indians of the reservation are great patriots. They celebrated the Fourth yesterday at Lamoreau's in great style. They slaugh-tered the usual number of dogs. The Grand Forks Herald, in its account of the Fourth of July celebration there, gives an extended report of Hon. Johnson Nickens' speech. The speech is spoken of in the highest terms of praise, losing with the expression: "Loud applause greeted the oration, which was delivered in a truly eloquent manner."

A good soaking rain began falling this morning at about 8 o'clock and continued for two hours steadily. The ground was well moistened, to a depth of several inches when the rain ceased falling. There will be a good many fields of late sowed grain helped by the recent rains, and a good many that have wheat heading out short will show up in harvest with big heads of the usual length. Many farmers who supposed they would be compelled to cut what grain they had with headers will now be able to use harvesters. The feeling of dissatisfaction over the crop prospect in this county is gradually disappearing.

A contributor to the gopher literature, in the New Rockford New Era, observes that the poison furnished by the county commissioners has done a great deal of good, but is still not as effective as it should be. He proposes a remedy of self-destruction oy innoculation with hydrophobia. His plan is to innoculate a few of the pests in different localities and let them run. After nine days they will commence their deadly work among themselves, and they will not stop until extinct. The work is early and rapidly performed. The expense to the county is nothing, as the stuff can be procured from the east free of charge. In eighteen days after inoculation the gophers have run their time.

The "world renowned soul-catcher," Taylor got his circus tent up in St. Charles, Minn., and the community was bombarded with oratorical mud for a few days, says the Times, until the decent men of the village were compelled to order Taylor to move on. It is understood that whenever this champion of goodness and virtue gets off a particularly tough remark which he thinks applies to some sinner in the audience, he calls it a "Dakota twister." The Times closes a column account of his escapades as follows: "The souls that he advertised to save were saved, not by his presence, but by his absence. Our generous heart, therefore, feels like saying in the language of the poet:

Forgive the poor devilfor what he has said. As such things will talk of what runs in their head."

Rev. They form a beginning for securing others who may know them, and their friends in the old country. These people naturally like to settle where acquaintances live and their language is spoken. The little colony of foreigners in McPherson county is rapidy growing, principally from this reason. Last week at Edgeley twenty-four immigrants direct from Sweden arrived over the Milwaukee road. They were met by a number of their friends and taken out in the "Swede" settlement, where they will locate on government land. Stutsman county needs a nucleus of these people to settle on its vacant lands.

No Jamestown firm is more interested in the wheat crop than the Russell, Miller Co., and it is good to hear the estimate now put on the coming crop of this county by E. J. White, manager of the company. He has driven considerably over the country within the past two outlook of last week, he now thinks will give 10 bushels to the acre at harvest. Of course, there will be fields which will not be cut at all, but they are few, com-paratively. North of the track, the grain is coming out in fine shape. Har vest will be early, probably begin August 1st. It is likely that the company will be able to handle nearly all the wheat this year in their mill and eleva tors and pay for it, as usual, the highest prices. Farmers who have dealt with Mr. White in the past, are not likely to go elsewhere to dispose of their wheat.

It is extremely dangerous for persons to be riding or otherwise exposing themextent leaves a record of death or injury to persons or stock from such exposure. The Edgeley Mail records the experience of a citizen of LaMoure county, George Merrifield, who was driving an outfit of three oxen, wagon, buggy, etc., from his Ellendale to his Valley township farm last Saturday. He was overtaken by the storm, and a stroke of lightning came, instantly killing two of the oxen and severely shocking Mr. Merrifield. All his teeth were loosened and his tongue and lips were burned black. He was rendered unconcious for a time and when fully coming to his senses, found himself at a neighbors, inquiring his whereabouts. He apparently recovered, but while out riding in the hot sun Sunday was overcome by the heat and for a time apprehensions for his ultimate recovery were felt.

Owing to refusal of the city council to pay tribute for the privilege of continuing the public highway across the Fifth street bridge and up to the old grave ard, the claimant for damages, H. F. Elliott, has seen fit to fence the road up, and many people who do not know of his action, are compelled to drive around by the railroad shops in order to get out on the main road leading north. Elliott's lemand for the continuation of this wellknown road way is said to be $200-and John McGinnis $400. Both amounts the city preemptorily refuses to pay. is said that the road was graded in early days and the right of way given by the wn ers of the property in consideration, but through some neglect, the city failed to get deeds, and now comes a demand for tribute, which the city taxpayers are gratified in seeing the council efuse to stand. Some one, impatient at the obstructions placed across this frequently travelled roadway, tore them down yesterday, and it is said that Elliott has sworn out warrants for the arrest of the parties. The city will, as soon as possible, lay out and grade an easy and inexpensive new road from 8th avenue, which can follow a gradual slope over the bluff, near John Nichols' house. Mayor Fuller and the council are determined to administer city affairs after the most economical manner possible, and everybody who thinks of entailing any unnecessary expenses on the taxpayers this year, will most certainly get left.

Battle Between Ants.

Frank Hill, says the Kidder County Republican, gives the following account of a fight between ants, recently witnessed by him near Steele:

A singular battle took place in the suburbs of this city one day last week. A colony of large red ants attacked a nest of small black ants. When first observed, the red ants appeared to be bringing the blacks out of their nests and killing them as soon as they reached the surface. The black ants apparently did their best to avoid a battle, but finding they must fight, they swarmed out and were largely in the majority, though the massacre had been going on for more than an hour before the blacks had concluded to fight. The battlefield at 9 o'clock a. m. covered a space about ten feet long by four or five feet wide, and was completely covered by the combatants. It was a fight to the death. Hav-ing once clinched, they never separated until one or tho other was dead. movements were so rapid that the eye could scarcely follow them. During all this time there was a column of reinforcement of reds, about four inches wide, pouring in from their nest, which was about 70 feet distant. But the num ber of blacks seemed endless, and by 11 a. m. the battle was decidedly in their favor. At 12 o'clock every red ant that was slive lay on his back with a black ant hold of each of his feet, pulling with all their might, while another black one was engaged in cutting off the head of the red one. Such was the fate of nearly every red ant engaged in the battle, and probably full as many black ones were killed, for the whole field was covered with the slain. As soon as the battle was over, the victors began carrying the remains into their nest, and had about cleared the ground when night came. Next morning not a sign remained to show that the fight had taken place.

ITCHING AGONIES.

Every Night I Scratched until the Skin was Raw.

Body covered with scales like Spots of mortar. An awful Spectacle. Doctors uselecs. Cure hopeless. Entirely Cured by the Cuticura Remedies in five weeks.

by the Cuticura Remedies in five weeks.

I am going to tell you of the extraorainary change your Cuticura Remedies performed on me. About the 1st of April last I noticed some red pimpies like coming out all over my body, but thought nothing of it until some time later on, when it began to look like spots of mortar spetted on, and which came off in layers, accompanied with itching. I would scratch every night until I was raw, then the next night the scales, being formed meanwhile, were scratched off again. In vain did I consult all the doctors in the country, but without aid. After giving up all hopes of recovery, I happened to see an advertisement in the newspaper about your Cuticura Remedies, and purchased them from my druggist, and obtained almost immediate relief. I began to notice that the scaly cruptions gradually dropped off and disappeared one by one, and have been fully cured. I had the disease thirteen months before I began taking the Cuticura Remedies, and in four or five weeks was entirely curred. My disease was eezema and posoriasis. I recommended the Caticura Remedies to all in my vicinity, and I knew of a great many who have taken them, and thank me for the knowledge of them, especially mothers who have babes with scaly eruptions on their heads and bodies I cannot express in words the thanks to you for what the Cutinura Remedies, and I was an awful spectacle to behold. Now my skin is as nice and clear as a baby's.
